

Using ContractWorks to Manage Global Corporate Agreements.

A CASE STUDY: Technology companies with offices around the world need a way to track critical dates and details connected to everything from their human resources files and operational paperwork to vendor, licensing and non-disclosure agreements from one central location. In this case study we will discover how LogicMonitor uses ContractWorks to manage their growing company's contracts.

LogicMonitor

About

LogicMonitor is a SaaS-based performance monitoring platform for modern IT infrastructure.

Challenge

As a fast-growing software company LogicMonitor has offices, employees, and partnerships around the world, all with unique contracts and agreements that must be easily found, renewed, and organized in one central location.

With locations spread throughout North America, United Kingdom, China and Singapore, and over 10,000 unique contracts, they needed a solution that would allow them to completely digitize their business' contracts in a simple and organized fashion.

Solution

The executive team at LogicMonitor knew that they needed an effective technology solution to add to their company's resources in order to successfully manage and protect all of their corporate documentation, especially their employee information and non-disclosure agreements. They wanted a solution that was easy-to-use and affordable, that also had the security features necessary to protect their corporate data. They found everything they were looking for in ContractWorks.

Why ContractWorks?

The ability to create tags with custom parameters along with a robust security feature set were key factors in LogicMonitor's decision to use ContractWorks as their contract management software. But, it was the software's intuitive design and the ability to create custom reports and email alerts for specific key stakeholders that eventually convinced the team that ContractWorks was without a doubt the best solution for their business.

The LogicMonitor team also wanted to be able to:

- diligently organize all corporate contracts
- the ability to create contract types using multiple tags
- search for unique contracts using custom document tags
- create custom reports for stakeholders based on their role
- spend less time searching for documents
- protect sensitive employee information
- store and search for board communication specifics by date

The Results & Benefits

Using ContractWorks has allowed the team at LogicMonitor to completely modernize their company's processes around document and contract management, and ensures that all information uploaded to the system remains organized, searchable, and protected from security breaches, allowing the business to remain ahead of opportunity.

With ContractWorks, the LogicMonitor team spends less time searching for specific contracts and details, and more time advancing their technology and business. In particular ContractWorks allows them to remain in complete control over their business environment because they are confident that they know where everything is at all times, and more importantly, they can find it at a moment's notice. They use the system's custom tags and permissioned-based user roles to communicate with, and automatically notify, key company stakeholders when specific items need attention- like if a specific NDA with an organization or business is close to expiring and they need to get in touch with them in order to renew.

Key Stakeholders at LogicMonitor who use ContractsWorks are:

- Human Resources Manager
- Board of Directors
- Executive Team
- Finance Department
- Corporate Counsel

Today, LogicMonitor continues to use ContractWorks to manage all of corporate documentation, including employee contracts, NDAs, licensing agreements, vendor agreements, proof of valid insurance and certifications, board communications, and other corporate information that needs to be kept in a secure location.
